12-13컷 생성 프롬프트 (모델: Seedance 2.5)

Create an 8-second, 16:9 handmade clay stop-motion sequence consisting of exactly two shots, continuing directly after Supi taps her wristwatch twice.

REFERENCES
@Image1: Heady's character identity. Preserve his lavender clay skin, round ochre glasses, plum-colored sculpted hair, pencil, proportions, and established clothing.

@Image2: Doorway continuity. Match the characters' established positions, eyelines, wardrobe, lighting, and screen direction. Supi remains outside the doorway; Heady remains inside, facing her.

@Image3: The approved completed pasta structure. This is the authority for its exact silhouette, proportions, tiers, bracing, pasta arrangement, cheese joints, and placement relative to the stove. Reproduce this existing structure without redesigning it.

@Image4: The cat's identity, proportions, orange tabby markings, face, paws, and tail.

@Image5: The established apartment layout and surrounding furniture arrangement.

PACING
Total duration: 8 seconds.
Aim for approximately 3 seconds for Shot 12 and 5 seconds for Shot 13, allowing a natural cut point rather than rigid per-shot timestamps.
Keep Heady's apologetic reaction concise and emotionally readable.
Overlap the cat's yawn with the backward camera movement to allow enough time for the structure reveal and a brief final hold.
Use one clean cut between the two shots.

SHOT 12 - HEADY IS DEEPLY APOLOGETIC AND DOES NOT KNOW HOW TO RESPOND

Narrative context:
Heady already checked the time earlier in the story.
He already knows he is late and has missed Supi's calls.
Begin this shot with that awareness fully established.
His reaction is embarrassment and remorse in front of his boss, with no new realization about the time.

Camera:
A locked medium close-up of Heady, near-frontal with a slight three-quarter angle, viewed from Supi's side of the doorway.
Heady's face and the front of his upper body are clearly visible.
Supi is immediately off-camera, in front of him.
The apartment interior remains behind Heady.
Do not show the back of Heady's head.

Performance:
From the first frame, Heady already looks sheepish and deeply apologetic.
His chin is slightly lowered, his shoulders are drawn inward, and the inner ends of his eyebrows are gently raised in a pleading, remorseful expression.
He briefly seeks Supi's eyes, then awkwardly lowers his gaze toward the floor.
His lips part just slightly as if searching for an apology, but he cannot find the words and gently presses them together again.
With his shoulders still tucked inward, he gives one small, hesitant apologetic bow of the head.
End with him remaining slightly bowed and unsure how to respond.

The emotional combination must be clear:
sheepish embarrassment, deep remorse, and awkward uncertainty about how to apologize.
He is concerned about having let Supi down.
Keep the expression sincere, with a softly tense mouth and hesitant eye contact.
Let these small gestures overlap into one continuous reaction.

No glance toward the wristwatch or phone.
No sudden eye widening, startled eyebrow lift, gasp, jolt, or freezing in surprise.
No realization beat, double take, or expression suggesting that he has only just discovered the time.
No cheerful grin, laughter, tears, exaggerated panic, repeated bowing, or dialogue.
Do not repeat the wristwatch-tapping action.
Do not reveal the cat in this shot.

SHOT 13 - CAT YAWN AND FINAL STRUCTURE REVEAL

Camera:
Cut to a close-up of the orange tabby cat already seated on the uppermost supported section of the approved pasta structure.

The cat is settled securely in place from the first frame; it does not jump or climb onto the structure.
Include a visible portion of the pasta and cheese connections beneath its paws.

Action:
The cat squints, opens its mouth into one relaxed yawn, then closes its mouth and settles into a sleepy expression.
Its body remains seated, with only subtle head, chest, and tail movement.
Keep the yawn natural and compact enough to complete during this shot.

Camera movement:
Begin a smooth, gentle dolly backward as the cat starts to yawn, rather than waiting for the yawn to finish.
Gradually widen the composition to reveal the completed structure from its top down to its base.
Choose a lens and camera travel distance that allow the full reveal within this short shot without abrupt acceleration or a rushed pullback.
End in a wide composition showing the full structure standing directly on the floor in front of the stove, with enough surrounding kitchen context to make its location unmistakable.
Ease to a stop and hold the final composition briefly after the yawn finishes.

STRUCTURE AND SPACE CONTINUITY
Preserve the exact approved structure from @Image3 throughout the camera move.
It is made from rigid, uncooked golden pasta strands joined with small pale cream cheese pieces at the connections.
Keep its existing silhouette, tier arrangement, diagonal bracing, and top cantilever unchanged.
Do not add a platform, cushion, or new support for the cat.
Do not bend, rebuild, grow, collapse, or morph the structure.
The structure stands on the floor in front of the stove, never on a desk, table, counter, or kitchen island.
Use @Image5 for the surrounding room layout.
Keep any visible scattered pasta, cheese, fallen jar, and lid consistent with the approved scene.
Frame the ending around the cat and structure without introducing new character actions.

STYLE AND LIGHTING

Match the preceding footage: tactile matte clay, subtle fingerprints, miniature handmade props, restrained stepped character animation, and consistent warm midday daylight.

Maintain character identity and object scale across both shots.

Avoid glossy CGI surfaces, rubbery facial deformation, dramatic lighting changes, and sudden camera acceleration.

AUDIO

Quiet interior room tone.

A soft, brief cat yawn may accompany the visible yawn.

No dialogue, ringing phone, new doorbell, music, captions, subtitles, or watermark.
